Scottish Outdoor Access Code

In Scotland we have something called, access rights. These rights allow us access to most land......providing we always behave responsibly. The access code covers three main principles:

- Respect the interests of others.
- Care for the environment.
- Take responsibility for your own actions.

- Here are a few examples of behaving responsibly, when out and about in the great outdoors.

- Leave no trace: No litter, Dog Mess, traces of fires etc. (Take only photographs, leave only footprints) should be your mantra.
- Keep dogs on a short lead, unless very well trained. Never allow your pet to worry livestock.
- Be alert to hazards, pay attention to signs warning of potentially dangerous works ahead.
- Do not act in ways that may annoy or alarm others.
- Respect wildlife.

BE A HAPPY CAMPER:
- Use a camping stove. Don't light a fire in dry conditions or near woods.
- Carry a trowel to bury your poo in case public toilets aren't open.
- Leave nothing behind.
